MASTER IN THEORETICAL AND EXPERIMENTAL LINGUISTICS

www.ehu.eus

---

INTRODUCTION AND OBJECTIVES

---

The Master's Degree in Theoretical and Experimental Linguistics offers a general and unifying view of Linguistics. Its aim is to provide students with the competencies required for the study of both theoretical and experimental Linguistics. It allows students to specialise in the areas of Phonetics and Phonology, Sociolinguistics, Syntax and Morphology, Semantics and Pragmatics, Typology, Historical and Comparative Linguistics, Computational Linguistics, Psycholinguistics and Neurolinguistics. Due to its unifying character, it also promotes interdisciplinary research work in any combination of these areas from both a synchronic and a diachronic perspective.

Students who complete the Programme of Studies will be able to engage in the study of any language (with the added value that it offers the possibility of in-depth study of the Basque language). Additionally, the Master is fundamentally oriented towards research work leading to further doctoral studies.

English friendly master: Students must be able to follow classes in Spanish, but they will be allowed to be evaluated in English.

ENTRY PROFILE

---

Prospective students are expected to have basic knowledge of Linguistics, as provided by the Degrees in Philology, Modern and Classical Languages, Linguistics and Translation and Interpreting. Students with other degrees, such as Philosophy, Logic, Psychology or Education (esp. Foreign Language), must have shown an interest in the human language faculty during their studies. Candidates that wish to be admitted to the Programme must include an application essay where they state their motivation for studying Linguistics.
