GLOBALISATION

Forum internet

You can find forums on the internet about all sorts of topics.

The messages below have been taken from a forum dealing with globalisation.

- Is the message blogger for or against globalisation?
- Justify your answer with a sentence.

Message from: SIRROCO

Americans benefit from imposing their rules on the rest of the world: maximum liberalisation, reductions in public expenditure, decreases in labour costs, work flexibility

Message from: CAMEROUN

In the world of sports, everyone plays in their own category. We can't imagine the world leading football teams playing against small amateur clubs. Then how is it possible that companies from all countries and categories compete in the same field? Game rules are made by and for the powerful teams.

Message from: GAVROCHE

Many people strongly believe that American culture is heavily influencing the rest of the world as a result of globalisation. However, this is not always strictly true. Not everybody eats the same food as American people do. Neither does the rest of the world listen to the same music. We don't follow the same religion. Neither do we speak the same language. Or follow the same clothing trends.

Message from: NELLY

High competition within the free market has led to products becoming less expensive and of a better quality.

Message from: ALEX

Free movement of capital enables us to transfer millions of Euros to the other side of the world in one second. States are not able to control anything any longer. Also an ordinary person like me can elect a politician that hasn't got any control at all...

Message from: ANNABELLE

The problem is that competition leads to a mad race in productivity (Even though this is damaging people's health and the environment). It doesn't matter how money is made as long as it is being made.

Message from: INES

Globalisation has given me the chance to work... globalisation has brought international companies such as Carrefour to my country, which are providing us with more job opportunities. Globalisation is superb!

Message from : LILI

Globalisation brings a greater risk of diseases being transported unintentionally between nations. We'll all probably get the swine flu this winter.

1. Reading Comprehension (4 points). 0,5 every message: 0,25 for/against and 0,25 logical justification (including grammar correction)

Read the messages above and complete the table below

Message from	for	against	justification
Siroco		X	Americans are the most powerful people in the world and they impose their own rules for their own benefit.
Cameroun		X	If regarding sports everybody plays in their own category, when we talk about companies, competition should be similar. Otherwise, the most powerful countries lead the game in their own interest
Gavroche	X		Although American culture has spread all over the world, every country keeps their own identity
Nelly	X		Competition is always positive to improve prices and quality of products.
Alex		X	Capital controls everything in the world. Democratically elected politicians (governments) have not much to do.
Annabelle		X	Free competition can justify the aim «earn money» without evaluating the consequences.
Inès	X		Globalisation has created more employment in countries that originally had fewer job opportunities.
Lili		X	Globalisation makes the world more vulnerable and susceptible to airborne viruses.
