

Junior Consultant

ORPHOZ, a McKinsey company, is an operational strategy consulting firm which supports its clients to make things happen. At ORPHOZ, we offer a unique combination of experience, knowledge, network resources and flexibility. The heart of our business is the implementation of transformation projects in both the private and public sector, with high stakes until concrete results are achieved in the field. Our work is about delivering lasting outcomes. You can expect a uniquely varied and exciting working environment, as well as the opportunity to work with a talented and dynamic growing team.

A combination of excellence and attentiveness reinforces our unique positioning on the market. Our consultants benefit from tailored training throughout their careers. They work on innovative projects in close collaboration with our teams, working hand in hand with McKinsey, while developing a strong entrepreneurial spirit.

It is our consultants who create added value for ORPHOZ.

With its strong growth plans in Spain and Portugal, ORPHOZ is looking for Consultants capable of identifying tailored solutions for our clients by assisting and coaching them daily in the field, while contributing to the life, influence, and development of the firm.

What you will do

- As a junior consultant, you will manage workstreams largely independently, with the support of a project manager or senior consultant. As you gain experience, you will gradually assume responsibility for delivering parts of projects yourself
- You will support other consultants and clients in projects or workstreams and successfully hold client meetings and workshops to achieve the project's objectives together
- You will contribute to the life, influence, and development of the firm: participation in internal projects, event organization, and content production
- You will grow in a stimulating and human environment where quality of life at work is our priority

Does this seem like a good fit for you?

- You are driven by creating long lasting impact, and enjoy working with people to achieve results

- You have a master's degree in business, economics or engineering, with a strong record of academic achievement
- You have strong knowledge or experience in project management consulting, e.g. internships in Project Management Office (PMO) in the context of transformation projects
- You enjoy the flexibility and agility that is required in a consulting environment
- You are fluent and effective communications in Spanish and English (verbally and in writing)
- You have flexibility to travel
