My overall Erasmus experience was enriching, professionally affirming, and very positive. I got to meet staff, learn about the local university, share information on South Africa and Stellenbosch University, not to mention, develop critical awareness of artificial intelligence amongst undergraduate students. Overall, it was a valuable opportunity for the university partnership.

The Erasmus+ Programme continues to play a transformative role at the Technical University of Kenya by fostering mobility, collaboration, and innovation with the University of the Basque Country in Spain. I had a great opportunity to be hosted by Prof. Fernando Ruiperez and learnt a lot about modern computational techniques that enhanced my research skills.

The mobility experience was indeed a great one. From the warm welcome and hospitality of my hosts, to the insightful exchanges with the students, it will remain a cherished experience. While I would have loved more class time with the students, the two days we spent together were quite enriching, not just from the perspective of their preparedness for the sessions and a strong disposition to engage in the discussion, but also because they brought to the class varied national backgrounds and perspectives. This means that I learnt from the students as much I as I shared with them. It was also great engaging with some of the students, at a more personal level and getting to learn about their worldview. Importantly, I sincerely appreciate the insight I got from counterparts and some of the students on the history, culture, politics, and foreign relations of the Basque Country.

Siempre dicen que no hay que volver a donde una vez fuiste feliz, ya que la mente tiende a edulcorar los recuerdos creando un escenario que nunca existió realmente. En mi caso, habiendo residido en Ciudad del Cabo durante varios años por un postdoc, volvía a Sudáfrica con ese miedo a que el país no fuera tan maravilloso como lo era en mi memoria. Pero afortunadamente sí lo es. Esta estancia ha sido como un viaje al pasado en el que nada ha cambiado, como si el tiempo se hubiera detenido. Una universidad situada en el mismo corazón de los primeros asentamientos europeos del país, la cuna de la cultura Afrikaans, rodeada de viñedos y montañas, en una pequeña ciudad que respira deporte por los 4 costados y que acoge al extranjero como a uno más. Ese orgullo y reivindicación de la cultura Afrikaner en la Universidad de Stellenbosch, en declive frente al inglés, me ha recordado a nuestra universidad y su reivindicación de la cultura vasca en un país de mayoría castellanohablante. Como mirarse en un espejo en el hemisferio Sur.
